FROM THE UNION.

MY COUNTRY, The Exile's Refuge and the Stranger's Home.
A land I know, upon whose generous soit
The flow'rs of love and triendship ever bloom;
Where peace and plenty bless the laborer's toil,
And misery's children find a welcome home.

Here bounteous nature, from her ample store, Profusely spreads her choicest dainties round; Here want, distracted, shuns the peasant's door, And penury's startling foot prints are not found

This peaceful spot of rich and fertile earth, This clime congenial to the patriot soul; his, this I hail, the country of my birth, Where first the light upon my being stole.

This is the land where friendship, peace, and love, And smiling liberty, delight to roam; This is the land whose shores shall ever prove THE EXILE'S REPUGE, AND THE STRANGER ALBERT.

From South America.

From the Washington City Gazette. PATRIOTS IN VENEZUELA.

We should more frequently notice were not induced to believe, that nine times out of ten, a little discrimination will enable the reader to detect the most egregious falsehoods. An earnest wish to endeavor to arrest the progress of such false statements, has deter mined us to be very particular in what we may publish respecting the affairs of the patriots, whether it relates to their civil or their military concerns. To accomplish this desirable object with as much accuracy as possible, and by a due allowance for the uncertain state of affairs, during a revolution, of which history scarcely furnishes a parallel, some pains will be taken to get the best information, in order that the paper may not be filled with a mass of contradictory or flying reports: by this plan we hope to be able to keep clear, in some degree, of exaggeration or gasconade, so injurious of Commons, by a majority of 16. to the cause of liberty and truth.

The last verbal accounts, said to be taken from the Caraccas Gazette, mention a battle fought on the 17th of April, at Baul, near St. Carolos; another report gives the same date of an engagement, but says it was fought at Rincon de los Toros, half a league from San Josef de Tesnados. It is hard to discover where the error lies. On referring to a Spanish map (by Juan de la Cruz, on 8 rgo sheets, drawn from original materias, published by permission of the king, in 1775, and very minutely executed, no such places are laid down: however. as also stated, a ctreat, in case of a reverse, in the direction of Calaboza, which well known to be in the neighbour-Mood of the seat of war, is highly probable. In this action the royalists say, Bolivar was all but taken prisoner, that he lost nearly 400 men killed, and 150 prisoners, out of 1050, with the whole of his baggage, arms and ammunition! the royalists only losing one officer and seven soldiers, and twenty-six wounded: so trumpets the Caraccas Gazette. Before we can credit this story, we must hear further, especially as the last details from the Patriot head-quarters represented the Venezuelians highly successful. rather dull-Bark dull again. Morillo's account, published in the same Gazette, some time back, of having killed M'Gregor, and pickled his body for last night produced his financial plan for reigns, for the ensuing summer, contratransportation to Caraccas, (who alive and in perfect health made his appearance in this city six months afterwards) is not forgotten. He deals largely in the marvellous: Falstaff's "men in buckram" are nothing to him.

In the affair of the 17th April, as related by the royalists, a bold attempt was evidently made by them to assassinate Bolivar: the murderers missed their victim, and sacrificed his venerable priest, Prado. Hear the bulletin of the royal banditti, in their own words, addressed

"When we arrived near his (Bolivar's) encampment, we made prisoner of a servant of his, who, informing us where his master lay his, who, informing us where his master lay sleeping, the colonel Don Rafael Lopez or-dered that the chief of the staff, Don Thomas Renavales should proceed with a party of infancy, to surprise (that is, to murder) him; by after having penetrated with the greatest an approaching the spot where Bolivar lay he encountered their chief of the staff fearful of the success of the stratagem, he threw himself towards the spot where the pretended supreme commander lay. He, rising immediately, at the moment they (the murderers) were about to surround him, fled to in Prussia. the mountains with the three persons who accompanied him; our party fired, and the three were killed-among which were his priest, fran Stephen Prado."

ON EDUCATION.

None who have for a moment reflected upon the subject, but will acknowledge the great importance of education. The subject has been discussed by the ablest pens, and whether we refer to the pages of the philosopher or the historian, o the experience and observation of mankind, or the principles of the human constitution, we must be satisfied with the truth of Lord Bacon's maxim, that Knowledge is power;" and that the true dignity and glory of man, consist in a virtuous education, or in the proper cultivation of his active and intellectual powers. From its inseparable connection with the virtue, liberty and happiness of individuals and society, it demands the first attention of all persons who feel an interest in the peace, order, happiness and liberty of mankind. The history of all nations proves, that knowledge, virtue, liberty and happiness are intimately connected. Refer to the historian's page; there we behold liberty in her retreat, from east to west, with philosophy, eloquence, glory and human happiness in her retinue.

Luxury, faction, ambition, and the ignorance of the people, drove liberty from Greece and Rome, where she had raised imperishable monuments. She for a short time planted her banners on the Alps, resided with the virtuous inhabitants of Switzerland, looked down upon her ancient seats of empire, and mourned the fallen greatness of Greece and Rome, and the degradation of the old continent, groaning under the iron sceptre of despotism. She sought footing on, and took a partial hold in the soil of Britain; but religious persecution drove her thence, and she found her last asylum in the woods of America. Here we trust she has laid the foundation of an empire durable as the Andes, and extensive as this vast continent:

The great work is still progressing liberty advances with the progress of education-" our brethren of the south borrow light from a proximate constellation;" and just in proportion to the know ledge and virtue of the people, will be the permanence of liberty in North, and its progress in South America. Free government to be permanent must be based on virtue, and supported by a distribution of knowledge among the people. Education then is a subject which " comes home to the business and bosoms | really cannot perceive the necessity or of mankind," in every country, but particularly in a free country, where the people are the makers and explainers of their own laws, and the guardians of their rights; and where it is their sacred duty to be ever watchful of the arts and designs of ambition. The man, therefore, whose endeavours are employed in the establishment of schools, in every part of our country, for the education of all classes of the rising generation, must be a much more useful member of society, thus paid to the despots of Europe, by and a greater friend to liberty and to man, their degraded subjects; they are unthan the selfish mercenary, whose time is worthy of freemen; they are generally feel but communicate its deep-toned employed in the pursuit and accumula- the offspring of the needy or ambitious, in tion of wealth, without any regard to the pursuit of executive " loaves and fishes." best interests of his fellow men.

Even in Europe, where it is considered by many to be the best policy of kings to keep their subjects in ignorance, we with a view to provide for their defence, behold one monarch making the education of his subjects an object of the first importance.

In a review of "a sketch of the power of Russia, in the Analectic Magazine for 1818," we find the following remarks-" Alexander, by the expansion of order, art and improved government, in short, by the establishment of schools, and the diffusion of knowledge among his subjects, has regenerated his vast empire. Schools for all, UPON THE PLAN OF BELL AND LANCASTER, have been sanctioned and promoted in every province."

The subject of Lancasterian Schools has likewise been pressed upon the consideration of the legislature of the state of New-York, by its liberal and enlightened governor, in a state paper, which, for its liberal, expanded, profound and patriotic views, has few parallels.

Il this distinguished orator has sometime incurred the imputation of speaking without sufficient preparation and ar rangement, he has retrieved his characcan be accomplished by declarations of ter in this masterly effort of popular high regard, and offers of cordial sup- eloquence. We pronounce it without reserve, as one of the proudest displays of oratory, that have ever burst from the halls of Congress. The arrangement is plain and obvious; the style smooth, flowing and eloquent, breathing the passions of a great soul, that can not only sympathics to others, by a magic that even stupidity and prejudice cannot se at defiance. But there is another feature of Mr. Clay's speech, more deserving of panegyric than the arrangement or the diction-we mean the vast flood of intelligence which it pours forth .-Among all the letters, pamphlets, manicial, if it should not be defeated by the festoes, and books which have been published on South American affairs for the last five years, we have no where seen such a solid and invaluable mass of infornation, as Mr. Clay has presented in is speech. After censuring the trimming policy of the administration in relanotorious English subject and tory was, tion to the aggressions of old Spain, for the last THIRTEEN years, Mr. Clay enters upon his main subject. The prodi-gious extent, the grand national features, sugars on the banks of the Mississippi, raised gious extent, the grand national features, and the astonishing physical rescources of Spanish America, are pointed out.-The sanguinary entrance of old Spain, to this town; and will be sold by the hogshear paper, called the "Courier," in Charles- and her colonial oppression for three or barrel, as purchasers may wish, upon libe ton; he afterwards established a paper hundred years, are exposed at a single ral to glance. During the last session of Congress, the House of Representatives adopted a Resolu-tion, of which the following is a copy, viz. In the House of Representatives of the United States, March 30, 1818. Sesouven, That the Secretary of the Treas sury be requested to prepare and report to this House, at their next session, a plan for the apion of such means as are within the power of Congress, to the purpose of opening and improving roads, and making canals; together with a statement of the undertakings of that nature, which, as objects of public improve-ment, may require and deserve the aid of government; and also a statement of works, of the nature above-mentioned, which have been commenced, the progress which has been made in them, the means and prospect of their being completed, the public improvements carried on by the states, or by companies, or incorporations which have been associated for such purposes, to which it may be deemed exbedient to subscribe, or afford assistance, the erms and conditions of such associations, and he state of their funds; and such information, as, in the opinion of the secretary, shall be ma-terial, in relation to the objects of this resolu-

THOS. DOUGHERTY, Clerk House of Representatives.
To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to comply with the important requisitions of the foregoing resolution, all companies or incorporations, associated for opening roads and making canals, which they may respectively conceive, require and deserve the aid of the government, are invited to furnish this department with such information concerning their respective undertakings, as is required by the resolution, and which may be necessary to bring their claims to the patronage of the government, before the Congress of the United States at the commencement of their next session.

Where a canal or road has been commenced, the communication ought to state distinctly the dimensions of the work; the nature of the soil and face of the country through which it is to pass: its greatest elevation and depression, and mean level; the progress which has been made; the expense incurred, and the whole probable expense, estimated upon the experiace acquired in the execution of the under-

In all cases of canals, the number and dimensions of the locks; the mean quantity of earth-to be removed per mile; the nature and extent of the navigation to which they are to be connected, should be distinctly made known. In every case, the facility of obtaining materials for the construction of roads, bridges and locks, should be stated. The acts of incorporation, or articles of association; the by-law which have been enacted; the amount of the fund hand; and the means and probability of enfor-cing the payment of the balance; should invariably be stated in every communication. And generally every kind of information which can shed light upon the undertaking.
